

ABSTRACT

The first relationships has a vital importance in the process of build the child's neuropsychomotor development. The exercise of the mother function, the same way the social relationships, both will serve as a base for the constitution of the corporal image, wich is the precursor of the corporal scheme and the subsequent psychomotor aspects of development. The children who born with a deficiency can find additional limitations in the course of your development due to this first processes being marked by the maternal feelings related to the loss of the ideal child. The conflicting feelings related to this situation as anger, fear, and distress, for example, can difficult the full experience of maternity, and commonly affect the quality of the mother-child relationship. Parents who have a child with a deficiency commonly experience high levels of stress related to the mourning and the several demands related to the child condition. With the various forms of support family, social and adequated health, this parents has the possibility to reframe this loss and promote an enviroment positive to the child development.

Keywords: maternity; deficiency; corporal image.